In the house chamber a great many extra eats, all that the space would accommodate, had been placed, and these were occupied by citizens and many women, the latter the wives and daughters of members of the general assembly. He refer-red to his achievement in politics and cess in political life, it was not due to any ability, genius or talent he in-herited, but to his love of an ideal. If his example was of any service to the young men of the country it would be because it would show that a poor man with nothing can assume a poor man with nothing can assume some position in society by adhering to ideals that other people share. He then alluded to the way he spent his time in the capitol, just prior to addressing the body. He had been in the library he said where he had found something of the Trumbulls, and he was pleased to discover that Lyman Trumbull of Chicago was a lineal descendant of the Trumbulls of Connecticut. "It was in Lyman Trumbull's law office that I spent many years and this man more than any other has influenced my life," said Mr Bryan.

He also saw a copy of the "blue

He also saw a copy of the "blue laws" of Connecticut and he said he preferred the "blue laws" of this state to some "yellow" ones recently adopted in other states. In politics he said it is not always the man who he said it is not always the man who boasts that he never scratched a ticket, who makes the best citizens. "The day will come when the best citizens will be the men who say that they never voted a ticket unless as their consciences dictated." He then devoted his speech to the matter of favoring the election of United States senators by the votes of the people. senators by the votes of the people.

At the dinner Governor Woodruff

nded that he wished Mr Bryan would come to Connecticut for a while, it might cure him of his presidential aspirations. "I would like to have him tackle the Connecticut lobby."

Rome, April 18 .- A public consistory took place at the vatican to-day with great ceremony and even additional interest, as such ceremonies uuder Pope Plus X have been less frequent than during the last pontificate, and consequently arouse greater expectation. As Rome is now crowded with tourists, especially Americans, the demand for tickets was phenomenal. At a very early hour all the street leading to St Peter's were black with sable-clad figures hurrying to get good places at the vatican and soon the hall of Bentifications and he corridors through which the papal ssion passed, were crowded with priests, monks, men in evening dress, and ladles in black veils, while the tribunes erected for the occasion con-tained the family of the pope, the Roman aristocracy and the members of

The procession accompanying the pope was composed of many notabili-ties. The Swiss guard headed the and the Noble guard surprocession, and the Noble guard sur-rounded the person of the pontiff, who was dressed in white. He was pre-ceded by the cardinals in full red robes, and followed by the bishops and archbishops.

When the pontiff was seated on the throne, the six new cardinals advanced one by one to receive the red hat. Each prelate knelt at the feet of the pope while the master of cere-monies held a magnificent red hat over the cardinal's head and the pope saying Accipe Galerum Rubrum, ec-ters, rose and gave the papal em-brace. The new cardinals then passed from cardinal to cardinal to re-ceive the kiss of brotherhood while the choir sang the softest music. The only cardinal created at the secret consistory.
